

UNCF/Mellon Teaching and Learning Institute

“Extending a Legacy of International Presence and Outreach at HBCUs-Social Justice and Education Policy for the Twenty-First Century”

August 10-12, 2011 at Hampton University

Many of our schools have a rich legacy of international outreach. Such endeavors involve alumni founding schools around the world, student/faculty activism in community service projects, political development initiatives sponsored by departments or faculty members abroad. Other initiatives include a broad range of academic and professional exchange programs for administrators, faculty, staff, and students. Such efforts provide participants with language immersion experiences along with innumerable networking opportunities for personal and professional growth. But how, if at all, do these opportunities impact the social or political goodwill of the people living in these “visited” nations, and should such programs be responsible for such civic engagement, asking participants to consider the long- or short-term influence their time in this foreign country might positively or negatively have on the citizens living there?

Invited Guest Lecturers include:

- ❖ Dr. Hoda Zaki, Professor of Political Science, Co-Director of African-American Studies and the Honors Program at Hood College, Author of Civil Rights and Politics at Hampton Institute: The Legacy of Alonzo G. Moron;
- ❖ Dr. Solomon S. Kabuka, Director of the Institute for Global Leaders at the University of the Virgin Islands;
- ❖ Dr. Carlyle Corbin, Representative for External Affairs, Government of the US Virgin Islands.

UNCF/Mellon Teaching and Learning Institute

“Extending a Legacy of International Presence and Outreach at HBCUs- Social Justice and Education Policy for the Twenty-First Century”

The goal of this 2011 UNCF/Mellon Learning and Teaching Institute is to bring administrators, faculty, and staff together to discuss these issues. Not only will we share success stories and challenges we face today in our efforts to prepare our students to be global citizens in the 21st Century, but we will also explore visions for our students and the roles we see them potentially playing as global citizens of a swiftly changing world. In addition to discussing existing and past programs from our representative campuses, participants will enjoy access to the university’s archives and begin a dialogue about a collaborative, exchange program(s) we might initiate between our campuses and, possibly, the University of the Virgin Islands.

Participants will receive a $500 stipend along with room and board for attending the two-day event.

If interested in participating in this UNCF/Mellon Learning and Teaching Institute at Hampton University, please submit a brief statement of interest (a minimum of 250-500 words discussing your area(s) of interest and what you hope to gain from the institute), along with a curriculum vitae, to Dr. Karima K. Jeffrey, via email: karima.jeffrey@hamptonu.edu. If sending attachments, please save as WORD2007 (.docx) or earlier document (.doc) or send as an Adobe 2007, or earlier, .pdf file.